

Introduction:

The legal terminology module is defined as the set of terms specific to legal sciences. Its main purpose is the theoretical study of designations of objects or concepts used in the legal field, the functioning of terminological units in language, as well as the translation, classification, and documentation issues that arise concerning them.

Its importance lies in the fact that it allows law students to become familiar with documents written in the French language, as these documents serve as references for research, especially in the case of Bachelor's and Master's theses or doctoral dissertations. It contributes to the enrichment of legal lexicon and vocabulary, facilitating the acquisition and mastery of legal concepts in two languages, which, in our case, are French and Arabic.

Therefore, our focus primarily revolves around translating terms related to various fields of law through the study of specific legal texts. These texts mainly address the definition, branches, and sources of Algerian law, as well as constitutional and administrative law.

Note:

The legal terminology module is part of the cross-disciplinary units with the following specifications:

Coefficient: 1;

Evaluation method: final exam.
